AND PROPRIETORS. SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1875.

THE sudden death at Saratoga of the ors to abjust the disputed boundry line between Maryland and Virginia, brought the arbitration to an abrupt conclusion, and nothing more can be done in the matter until the vacancy is filled by legislaaction. All the lestimony in the ad been taken, and Senator Whyte was about to open the argument on the part of Maryland when Gov. Graham's illness was announced, and the Board adned to some future day.

THE sanitary condition of Henry T. Helmbold promises to become as interesting to Philadelphains as the whereabouts of Charley Ross. On Tuesday the Philadelphia newspapers declared that Helmbold was in an insane asylum. On Wednesday the Press said that elelmbold visited its office on Tuesday, "lookidg as bright as when extensively engaged in business a few years ago." A despatch from Long Branch announced his arrival there yesterday afternoon. He expects to spend a few weeks at the senside pre-vious to resuming business.

A curious blunder is said to have oc curred at Scribner's publishing house recently. An advertisement of four line was sent out to one hundred newspapers with instructions to spread over "eight lines" it should have read, but the clerk wrote it eight inches, and the consequence was startling. The article advertised was the "Baltimore Bonapartes." but the different printing offices taxed their ingenuity and type fonts to spread so few words over so large a space. The result was that orders poured in at such a rate that a new edition had to be printed.

A NEW YORK correspondent write that the publication in full of Duncan, Sherman & Co.'s creditors is making good many people feel rather awkward who have been giving as an excuse for the non-payment of their debts that "they were depositors with Duncan & Sherman and lost all they had there," The extent to which these pleas have been pushed since the failure would be surprising if it or if it could be known. Almost every broker's office in the street has an instance to re-The non-appearance of names this class in the scedule is now adroitly met with the objection that the list is im

A NOTICEABLE feature of the Twin Mountain and of the Crawford House is the appearance of the waiters at the tables. They are all, both men and women, either students or teachers in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Vermont schools, spending their wacation in a pure atmosphere, and obtaining fair remuneration for labor which occupies only a few hours of each day. What they lack in experience as waiters they are presumed to more than compensate for in attention and agreeable manners. The head waiter at the Crawford House is a theological student at Dartmouth College.

The Liberal Republicans of Ohion-those who went into the Cincinnati, and the does now working cordinally and heartily to defeat the Democracy in that State. Not a reformer among them is so bewildered as to suppose that political reform has anything correctly from the source. Mr. F. W. Bird did not agree with them now. What he does expect from the triumph of such a crowd as Jov. Allen and Sam Cary have after them, it would be hard to tell; but in a letter to the Tribms bewailing the wickness of the party in power, and despairing of a new one, he "welcomes the comes of Democratic success" Such is life.

ANOTHER VICTIM. o Old, Old Story of Lighting Fire with Kerosene, and the xplosion that Ensued.

he Cumberland News, August 18.1 Yesterday afternoon between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock, Miss Alice Morrissey, aged sixteen years, eldest daughter of Mr. William Morrissey who resides on Val-William Morrissey, who resides on Val-ley street, between Centre and Mechanic ley street, between Centre and Mechanic (near the latter), wishing to start a fire in a stove under a small shed in the rear of the house, poured coal oil from a can on the wood, intending to apply a match to the same. It seems that there had been a fire there, made before 12 o'clock, and which was yet smoulderbeen a fire there, made before 12 o'clock, and which was yet smouldering. As soon as she began to pour the oil a flame burst out and entered the spout of the can, then over the stove, and the consequence was an explosion, driving out the bottom of the can directly toward the young lady and setting fire to her clothing, which was light and inflammable. Terrified by the explosion and the danger to her person, she ran out the side entrance into the street, screaming as she went, and stopping a moment there was seen by two or more persons who went quickly for water. Her screams were also heard by those in the bakery of Mr. Adam Arnold, whose house fronts on Mechanic street, and as Mr. Daniel Arnold, a young man, son of the proprietor of the bakery, and employed there, opened the Valley street door, Miss Morrissey ran to and seized him about the arms or waist. His arms thus coming in contact with the flames were burned some, but not seriously. By this time nearly all the clothing was burned off the unfortunate woman, and one of those who had first seen her in the street arrived with a bucket of water which he dashed upon her head, extinguishing the fire in her hair et of water which he dashed upon her head, extinguishing the fire in her hair and also the burning clothing yet remaining on her shoulders. She was then removed to the residence of the family.

Nearly all the entire body of the young lady was shockingly burned, and her mouth and throat were also much injured by inhaling the flames. Several physicians were summoned—the case being in charge of Dr. Wiley—and every attention possible given for her relief. There was no hope expressed by the medical men of her recovery, although at latest accounts last night she was yet living.

The beach at Long Branch is getting to be the scene of riotous fun and jullify now that the number of persons who face the rolling surf is comparatively few, and of laties only five or six. It is not that the rollers are enormously high, though at intervals one does get caught by a monstrous fellow eight or nine feet in altistrous fellow eight or nine feet in altitude; but they come in so fast that a bather has no sooner picked himself together after the attack of one, than he is prosetrated by the onslaught of another. Some of the gentlemen lately got up a little comic interlude when bathing was at its worst, when the rollers were fiercest and the undertow the most dangerous. The guests at the hotel en masse came down regularly to the sands and encouraged the bold swimmers
by their presence. One of the gentlemen sands and encouraged the bold swimmers, by their presence. One of the gentlemen donned over his bathing costume an old calico gown, and conceated his ruddy face and heavy beard beneath a sun-bonnet. A handsome shawl, lent by a female accomplice, completed his costume. A party of bathers came rushing through the surf cover the sands seized upon the apbathers came rushing through the surf-over the sands, seized upon the ap-parent female, hurled down the shawl, and grabbing her with vigorous hands carried her off bodily and plung-ed her into the sea. Shrieks arose from every hand, and there were cries of Gentlemen will you allow this outrage?" "Are there any men here-any gentlemen?" "It's a shame to allow such things." "Blood will be shed for this," and a hundred other remarks whose incoherence was excusable under for this," and a hundred other remarks whose incoherence was excusable under the completeness of the deception. While some, deeply agitated, exclaimed, "She will be drowned," the calico dress fell off, the old bounet was washed away by an angry wave, and one of the best swimmers of the Branch rose buoyantly on a wave in the place of the old woman, amid the inextinguishable laughter of the lookers-on.

A Novel Bridge Tour, or How Poor Bridge Grooms do in Kentucky.—There came one day to a little inland town in came one day to a little inland town in Kentucky a young rural couple who had just been bound by the "silken bonda." Their destination was the depot, and the bridegroom was evidently quite impatient for fear the train should arrive before he could reach the office. Buying one ticket, they stood on the platform until the train had stopped. When they entered the car the bridegroom found his bride a sent, kissed her most affectionately, bade her "good-bye," and going out, seated himself on a box and commenced whittling most vigorously. He watched the train out of

Recent events have called public atten-tion to the intimate relation of morals and manners. It may be said that there is no greater peril to mortality than much that is called merely free and easy much that is called merely free and easy manner. Young men, and even young women, permit themselves a freedom and license of manner, which having all the aspect of impropriety, may very readily acquire substance. Edward ad-dresses Emily with a loud and jesting intimacy of tone and conduct, which might be expected in the sailor saloons of Water streefor Wanning but which is remight be expected in the sailor saloons of Water street or Wapping, but which is re-pulsive and odious in the drawing-room or among refined and gentle persons. Ed-ward and Emily would be amazed to be told that they have not the manners of a gentleman, or of a lady, and have the air of the deas monde. They think that they are especially comme if four, and above all others they know what is the rule of high others they know what is the rule of high society. But they are merely vulgar, and have manners of those who are worse than merely vulgar. Coarseness can not be gilded into refinement. The young woman who habitually calls her young friends of the other sex by their Christian names and who suffers any thing that can be called familiarity, although it fall short of actual indecorum, should reflect carefully. "Sir," said a lady to a policeman who took her elbow to pass her over the street: "if I wish you to touch me I will ask you." No woman of a high sense of personal dignity wishes any man to lay his hand upon her thoughtlessly or unnecessarity. Nor will such a woman permit any kind of rudeness in the tone or manner of men. others they know what is the rule of high
